166th Air Fighter Division

1. [redacted] the 22nd Airfield Battalion at Mlada Airfield near Lysa nad Labem (N 50-12, E 14-50). [redacted] the 2nd Air Fighter Division consisted of the 6th, 7th, and 2nd Fighter Regiments which were all based at Mlada Airfield. In November 1953, the 2nd Air Fighter Division was redesignated as the 166th Air Fighter Division. Major Zdenek Kamenicky was the base commander and also the commanding officer of the Division. He assumed these commands in the beginning of 1953. He became the Base commander mainly because he undertook the task of building up the airfield: constructing a connecting road between Milovice (N 50-14, E 14-54) and the airfield, building interconnecting roads on the airfield proper, building new billets for enlisted men, NCOs, pilots, billets for married military personnel with dependents, new messhalls for officers and enlisted men, and a medical dispensary for the entire Mlada Military Area. Kamenicky also supervised the construction of a third hangar and four POL storage dumps. All of this construction was performed very efficiently and without any defects. In summer of 1954, Major Kamenicky was promoted to lieutenant colonel. Also in summer of 1954, Kamenicky was asked by Air Force Headquarters in Prague to arrange an acrobatic show with MIG-15 aircraft for Air Force Day which was to take place in Prague in October, 1954. He performed his assignment with such outstanding results that the Czechoslovak Air Force Commander, General Josef Vosahlo, sent him a congratulatory telegram. Soon after that Air Force Day, Kamenicky was promoted to colonel.

Staff of the 166th Air Fighter Division

2. The staff of the 166th Fighter Division was as follows:

- a. Soviet Personnel (Sovetsky pridelenec). The 166th Air Fighter Division had three Soviet officers: One colonel and two lieutenant colonels [redacted]. These officers were always dressed in uniforms, spoke only Russian, moved freely on the base, sometimes were accompanied by the base commander or the deputy commander for political affairs. These Soviet officers never talked to airmen. Not even the base commander
